MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

"Black and White" at the Arch. The new drama by Wilkie Collins and Pecnter, the tragedian, entitled Black and White, which was produced last evening at the Arch Street Theatre, is, to a considerable extent, a remodelling of old materials, but for the most part the work has been skilfully done, and in some of the scenes the play possesses a thrilling interest, while, as a whole, is is far more dramatic and effective than the majority of such performances. There are some portions which might with advantage be curtailed, and after the first act Mr. Collins appears to have felt his powers as an ingenious weaver of mysterious plots cramped by the limitations of a three-act drama, and one or two very characteristic scenes, which he would have elaborated into something startling in a novel, possess very little real interest in the play. The story briefly is that "Count Maurice de Layrach" falls in love with "Miss Milburn," while she is on a visit to Paris, and follows her to her home in Trinidad. Just after he enters the house he is recognized by "Ruth," a quadroon woman, who sends him a mysterious message to visit her immediately. He complies with her request, but is followed by "Stephen Westeroft," a planter, whose jealousy has been excited by his visit to "Miss Milburn," and by "Miss Milburn," who is also jealous from discovering that he is about to make a mysterious visit to another woman, "Westcroft" climbs upon the roof of the quadroon's hut, and "Miss Milburn" conceals herself behind a curtain, where they hear "Ruth" declare herself to be the mother of "Maurice," and adjure him to fly from the istand, as he is by birth a slave. This discovery is made use of by "Westcroft" to gratify his revenge, and he contrives to get the unfortunate "Maurice" in his power. "Miss Milburn" is shocked and horrifled, and at first repels him, but finally acknowledges her love and exerts herself to rescue him. "Westcroft" defeats her, however, and purchases "Maurice" as a chattel belonging to a mortgaged estate that formerly belonged to "David Michaelmas," a white valet in the service of "Maurice," and which was appointed to be sold on the morning after the arrival of the latter. Just as the planter imagines that he has his rival in his power, "Michaelmas" enters with a deed of manumission which he had discovered in the descried wing of the mansion where the father and owner of "Maurice" had died, and the piece ends with gnashing of teeth on the part of "Westcroft" and general rejoicing on the part of everybody else. The finest scene in the play is the interview between the quadroon woman and her son in the first act. This was most admirably played by Miss Mary Wells and Mr. Barton Hill, and the subdued but in tense and powerful acting of the lady gave the scene a thrilling interest which held the audience spellbound. The search of "Michaelmas" for the hidden deed of manumission in the third act might have been made interesting if the writers of the play had displayed some little ingenuity, but at present it is only tedious, and the same may be said of all the scenes between "Michaelmas" and "Piuto," the comic "nigger" of the piece. The latter character is a failure, and while it is impossible for Mr. Hemple to make it funny, he might make it respectable by discontinuing the use of expletives which, as he utters them, are neither forcible nor expressive. Mr. Mackay played the part of "Michaelmas" as well perhaps as it could be played, but this attempt of the author to create an original character is not a success, and even so good an actor as Mr. Mackay can make little of it.

As for the rest, the play is elegantly mounted with new and beautiful scenery, and finely acted throughout. Mrs. Drew gave a very forcible and artistic personation of "Miss Milburn," and Mr. Barton Hill has a part exactly suited to him in "Count Maurice de Layrach," and the planter, "Stephen Westcroft," was well represented by Mr. James. Miss Alice Logan, who made her first appearance in this city last evening, made a favorable impression, but the part assigned her was of such small importance that we are not able to form any decided opinion as to her abilities as an actress.

The City Amusements. AT THE ARCH the new drama of Black and White will be performed this evening.

AT THE WALNUT Mr. Joseph Jefferson will appear this evening as "Rip Van Winkle." AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE A Marriage by Lanterns and Jeannette's Wedding will be performed this even-

Fo-morrow Mr. and Mrs. Whisten will have a benefit. AT THE AMERICAN the De Lave Sisters will appear this evening in their wonderful acrobatic feats.

THE NATIONAL PEACE JUBILEE.—The Boston Journal says:—The official programme of the National Peace Jubilee will be found in our advertising columns of to-day, and we commend it to the care-ful perusal of our readers. Never before was such a magnificent musical feast placed before the people of this or any other land. Aside from the magnitude of this great festival of song, which is to unite the great vector of a pation in pages of praise and the glad voices of a nation in pæns of praise and thanksgiving, there is much which commands admi-ration. The character of the music alone places the ration. The character of the music alone places the affair far above all similar festivals which have been held, either in America or Europe. Mr. Gilmore has shown wonderful tact and skill in the preparation of his programme, as well as in organizing and bringing thus far towards completion the grandest musical enterprise the world has ever witnessed. He has provided music which will meet with the approbation of every taste—the popular as well as the classical. The grandest, loftlest, and most sacred inspirations of the great masters of song find ample place, and are to be rendered with a fullness and an effect their guthors may have dreamed of but certainly never realized. So, too, the noble ness and an effect their actions may have treathed of but certainly never realized. So, too, the noble hymns which evoke such a ready response in the breast of every lover of his country—which thrill a nation's heart and inspire her sons to patriotic devotion and brave deeds—have fitting recognition, and their familiar and welcome strains will be marked by an emphasis in good keeping with the great pur-poses of the occasion.

Legions of trained singers, an army of players, organ peals, the brazen voices of the once dread in struments of warfare, and the joyful bells, will all unite in anthems of "Peace and Good-will." Two musical artists, whom the whole civilized world de-lights to honor, will grace the occasion with their presence and their efforts, and in all its various deartments the demonstration has been organized upon the grandest scale that could possibly be ob-The details we leave for our readers to glean from programme as published. There is granden in every line.

The safe was sold to the Bank subject to such test as the Directors saw fit to put it to. They invited machinists and others to try their hands at safe breaking and boring. The Bank employed Major Epley, one of the best machinists in this section of the country, to "drill the safe if possible." The Major, with the assistance of his son, spent several hours in preparing his drills and tools, and having secured nours in preparing his drills and tools, and having secured a strong leverage, went to work, and after entirely using up his drills, and hardly making an impression on the safe, gave his opinion that drilling through, inside of two weeks, was out of the question.

The safe was then attacked with heavy sledges. Mesers.

Small, Billmeyer & Co. were called upon for three of their best Blackenith Strikers, who were furnished with heavy aledges. After placing the safe in the middle of the side walk, where they commenced whacking away in regular lorge style, dealing blows that were heard for squares, but with no effect on the safe. It may be imagined with what strength they dealt their blows, when they were sufficient to crack the siedge and render it useless. The trial created quite an excitement, and all were satisfied that a Burglar-Proof Sufe had at last been found.—Fork Democratic Fren.
